Owl Prowls

Wednesday, January 16 & Wednesday, February 20; 5:30 – 6:30 p.m.
Watch Rock Preserve, Old Lyme

As most birds are settling down for the night, owls are just beginning their day. With a wide array of adaptations for being active when most of us are sleeping, owls are among the most interesting species in the bird world, and we have quite a few species here in Connecticut. Come learn about and search for these nocturnal hunters on a night hike through Watch Rock Preserve. Bring a headlamp or flashlight (preferably one with a red light setting) and binoculars, and bundle up! Appropriate for ages 10 and up.

$5 for members, $10 for non-members

Winter Nature Walk

Saturday, January 26, 9 – 11 a.m.
Rocky Neck State Park, East Lyme

Just because it's cold and there's snow on the ground doesn't mean there isn't anything going on outside! Brave the cold, and join one of our teacher-naturalists for a winter walk as we learn what is happening in nature as the mercury drops. Dress warm, and bring your binoculars.

$5 for members, $10 for non-members; children under 4 free

Bird Feeders 101

Saturday, February 9; 1 – 3 p.m.
RTP Estuary Center, Old Lyme

This afternoon activity will cover everything you need to know about bird feeders, from how often you should clean them to what kind of seed different species prefer. While you're here, make your own all-natural bird feeder to hang in your yard.

$3 for members; $5 for non-members;
children under 4 free
